

Map your network. Find the warm path in.

How to use your LinkedIn connections export to find who you know at every target company — and how to use expert networks to generate income while you search.

IF YOU TAKE NOTHING ELSE AWAY

Five things that matter most

- Your LinkedIn CSV export contains hundreds or thousands of contacts you've forgotten you have. Export it today.
- The warm path — a contact who knows you and works at a target company — converts at 5x the rate of a cold application.
- Expert networks (GLG, AlphaSights) pay you to share your professional expertise. Most senior candidates qualify. Takes under a week to start.
- You don't need a direct connection to a hiring manager. You need one person between you and them.
- Upload your CSV to NextChapter and Victoria maps your warm paths to every company in your target list automatically.

The most valuable asset in your job search is already in your LinkedIn account. Most candidates never use it.

Your LinkedIn connections CSV contains the full map of your professional network — organized and searchable by company, function, and location. Here's how to use it.

STEP 1 — EXPORT YOUR LINKEDIN CONNECTIONS

Three clicks. Available immediately.

- Go to LinkedIn → Me → Settings & Privacy → Data Privacy → Get a copy of your data
- Select "Connections" only (not the full archive — that takes longer)
- Download arrives in minutes as a CSV file
- The file contains: name, company, position, connected date, email (if they shared it)

NEXTCAPTER TOOL

Upload your LinkedIn CSV to NextChapter and Victoria maps your warm paths to every company in your target list — showing you who you know at each company and generating the right outreach message for each contact. Available at launchyournextchapter.com

STEP 2 — MAP YOUR WARM PATHS

For every target company, find one person

Primary target: current employees at the company

Search your CSV for the company name. For each match, evaluate: do they work in your target function? Could they introduce you to the hiring manager? Even a tangential connection (different department) is warmer than cold.

Secondary target: former employees

Former employees often have active relationships with their ex-colleagues and hiring managers. They can tell you who to talk to and what the culture is actually like. Sometimes more useful than a current employee.

Tertiary: second-degree connections

Search LinkedIn for your target company. Filter for second-degree connections. Find your mutual contact. Message them: "I noticed you're connected to [Name] at [Company]. I'm targeting them for a [role] — would you be willing to make an intro?"

EXPERT NETWORKS — INCOME WHILE YOU SEARCH

GLG, AlphaSights, and others

What expert networks are

Companies like GLG (Gerson Lehrman Group), AlphaSights, Guidepoint, and Third Bridge connect investment analysts and consultants with subject matter experts for 30-60 minute phone consultations. If you've worked in an industry for 5+ years, you almost certainly qualify. Calls pay $150-$500/hour, deposited within 30 days.

How to register (takes 15 minutes)

- Go to glg.it, alphasights.com, guidepoint.com, and thirdbridgegroup.com
- Submit your LinkedIn profile or résumé
- Fill out your areas of expertise (be specific — not "finance" but "specialty pharmaceutical procurement" or "B2B SaaS pricing strategy")
- You'll typically be approved within 3-5 business days
